

We have come way too far to begin allowing telemarketing to once again invade our personal space. I do not know of 1 single person who enjoys having their time, whether family or personal, interrupted by rude and persistent sales calls. If I want their services, I will call them. I personally do not appreciate the invasion of my time and privacy.